Same old argument

By Gail Christian

Herbert Cole was convinced they needed a gun in the house for protection, but his wife, Alice, disagreed. It was the same old argument, and Herbert's position was, "Guns don't kill people; people kill people."

Refusing to discuss the subject, Herbert went to bed saying, "Tomorrow," as if indicating the conversation would happen the next day. The problem was that he NEVER wanted to discuss this so Alice wondered what the "conversation" would be like.

Unfortunately, someone broke into the house that night - before they ever got a chance to have that conversation the following day. Who would prove correct? Was it a good idea to have a gun in the house?

Do guns kill people or do people (with guns) kill people? Or are both Herbert and Alice completely off the mark with this argument?

Good story about an all too common disagreement these days. Are you safer WITH a gun in the house or without one? Read this story in the hope it will help you settle the argument BEFORE you have to know for certain which is the safer choice for you.
