By Ernest Ductan

This book is an eye opener for those who want to protect themselves against undesirable tactics from others. It's a quick and easy introductory read and it's worth the couple of dollars and minutes spent reading it. I recommend it

I like the persuasion part of this book

By Denniger Bolton

I can always tell how much I like a nonfiction book by the number of notes I take on my reader. I took a lot on this one. The author, Jeffery Dawson, says this book will give us the necessary ingredients to cook up a life full of opportunities to have our way in matters that are important to us. Manipulation, deception, half-truths and mind control are closely related. Personally, while it's good to know if you are being manipulated or deceived, I don't care to manipulate or deceive others. Just not my style, but persuasion is another thing. It seems these same techniques or tactics can be used in persuading someone to see your side of things. He lists things like have confidence, doing your research so you have the concrete facts, appeal to emotions which is exactly what the best advertisers do, and to sound reasonable and watch the reactions of the person you are trying to persuade. All good tactics.
